

“TRAINING COMMAND FIVE”

1. Mission First: Understand how you contribute to your unit's and your family's missions, and place their accomplishment above all else.
2. Leadership By Example: People are watching your every deed, and listening to your every word. Make sure you are setting the example for your subordinates, peers, and leaders.
3. Balanced Excellence: Marines and Sailors succeed in everything they do. You must earn your personal and professional reputation every day. Strive to excel in all areas, not just those you are comfortable in.
4. Seek Improvement: You know your strengths and weaknesses better than anyone else. Use your strengths to help others, but more importantly, tackle your weakness and turn them into strengths.
5. Character: Never do anything illegal, immoral, or unethical. Always do the right thing, while holding others accountable for doing the same.

P R I N C I P L E S

“The “Training Command Five” are intended as guidance for each Marine, Sailor, and Civilian of the command, regardless of rank, seniority, or position.

They provide broad guidelines for the personal and professional conduct across Training Command both on and off duty.

None of these principles are new, but I expect every member of Training Command to live by, rather than just understand them.”

*Brigadier General Jason Q. Bohm
Commanding General
Training Command*

